STERN COLLEGE FOR WOMEN
YESHIVA UNIVERSITY
NEW YORK, NEW YORK

It had to take four years — no way it could take less — for this yearbook to be completed.

We are privileged to serve as the editors to record in this moment of time — some of what was and what is . . .

We hope in your own future you will derive joy and pleasure from looking back at this capsulized documentation of our class — the class of '72.

The class of 1972, we feel has a bit of everything, intellect, vitality, sensitivity, and Jewish identity, and we hope our yearbook reflects this. It is designed to involve you in an awareness of our heritage and class history in a proud and meaningful manner.

This is the sum total of our collaboration, organization, imagination, and energy.

This is our contribution to your treasure of outstanding memories of Stern College.

MESSAGE TO THE GRADUATING CLASS

BY DEAN DAVID MIRSKY

To state that higher education in the United States is passing through a period of great trial and stress, is to state the obvious, but I believe that in a very real sense this period is a period of testing for all institutions of higher education. The process may be more painful for private colleges and universities, but all institutions of higher learning, public as well as private, are being put to the same test. I would like to touch upon two complimentary and very significant factors which contribute to this complex development: First, our society is beginning to reexamine its understanding of the function of higher education, and second, younger people are beginning to reexamine their function within, and their relationship to society.

Concepts which have governed the development of higher education philosophically and curricularly are being challenged. The utilitarian approach — even if such is not its necessary programmatic evolution — has resulted in the view that one of the chief functions of higher education is to prepare the individual to find a career and become a successful wage earner. Implicitly if not explicitly it has espoused a materialistic function for education, a response to economic needs of students and industrial demands of society. The disaffection of most younger people with higher education is the result of the rejection by them of this educational posture. The second factor is in essence the other side of the same coin. Students are left unfulfilled when they see themselves moving into a society which declares its commitment to the eradication of pain and suffering, want and disadvantage, but permits the erosion of moral and ethical principles. While there may be differences of opinion as to what moral and ethical systems are most acceptable, young people today seem to be almost unanimously committed to the position that declarations of acceptance of a system of ethics do not excuse failure to live up to the principles of the system.

What makes the education which Stern College gives its students unique is that over the years it has resisted the pressure to move in the direction taken by higher education in general and has remained unflaggingly true to the philosophy which animated the founders of Yeshiva University. It has built its curriculum on the belief that education must spring out of an unwavering commitment to the highest moral and ethical principles summed up in the Jewish tradition. We may have succeeded less in some areas of our program than in others, and may have done more for some students than for others, but our commitment to the principles of the Jewish tradition has remained and will continue to remain steadfast. You are leaving Stern College to enter new activities, whether in graduate school or in the community at large. We hope that the knowledge, and more important, the moral and spiritual perspectives which we have been able to impart to you will prepare you to function as a positive force in the community, both Jewish and general. It is our earnest wish that you will find fulfillment in your own lives, and enlighten the lives of all those whom you will encounter in the years ahead, by putting into practice that philosophy by which we have attempted to educate you: that all human activity, if it is to be effective and good, must be inspired by the principles of Torah.

Our best wishes go with you, as does our hope that you will remain loyal to our College and what it represents.

MESSAGE FOR KOCHAVIAH 1972

It gives me great pleasure to extend greetings to the 1972 graduating class of Stern College for Women. During your college years you have encountered many changes affecting our society and higher education. With awareness of the problems to be faced, you pursued your own studies diligently and took advantage of the opportunities for intellectual and spiritual development.

As you go forth to assume your roles in home, career, and community, you will be able to build on the sound foundation of values from the timeless heritage of Judaism and of the searching stimulus of the arts and sciences. Yeshiva University looks to you to meet the oncoming challenges in a spirit of dedication to human dignity and the welfare of mankind. I am sure that you will perform with distinction in service to the Jewish community and the community at large and that you will bring honor upon yourself and your Alma Mater.

May you all be granted continued well being and fulfillment.

Sincerely yours,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Samuel Belkin".

Dr. Samuel Belkin
President

Greetings by Mr. Max Stern to KOCHAVIAH
Stern College for Women Yearbook

It is with great pleasure that I extend warmest greetings to the 1972 graduates of Stern College for Women.

Each facet of the college experience has contributed immeasurably to your personal development. In the classroom, in cooperative efforts with faculty and administration, you have acquired increased understanding of the Judaic heritage, a knowledge of the liberal arts and sciences, and a sensitivity to the processes of responsible citizenship.

Your constructive participation in the development of alma mater has strengthened it in the pursuit of its primary goal: the education of young women imbued with the spiritual values of Judaism and a deep appreciation of the finest in Western culture, who can meet with confidence the challenges of modern life. The College is truly a better place for your having been here.

As the guardians of our Torah traditions in the home — and in your various roles in the professions and the community — you will find the years spent at Stern College taking on ever greater significance. I have abiding faith that you will utilize your education for continued growth and service, and extend my very best wishes for the future.

I Remember . . .

Esti Davidowitz

What does one say about a four year relationship that has ended? . . . that it was beautiful? . . . that it was memorable? . . . that it was intimate? . . . None of these can completely capture the essence of the relationship between us. It is difficult now to separate the emotions from the reality that existed. They are inseparable, united within me. For this relationship affected my entire being . . . my mind, my heart, my body, my spirit. It was rare and wonderful and somehow we never believed it would end.

There were times of joy, times of pain, times of gladness, times of suffering. But, it endured and I lived and learned and grew from every one of these experiences. My outlook broadened, my mind expanded, my potential developed, and I made my contribution — giving of my intellect, my character, and of my self. It was a "give and take" relationship. We each had particular qualities and faculties to offer the other. We strove to fulfill the needs and requirements of one another. It wasn't always easy. As in any relationship there were often conflicts that could have been avoided, personality clashes that could have been averted, little unimportant details that would suddenly loom out of perspective. But, finally, reason would prevail.

And the seasons changed. Autumn turned to winter and passed into spring . . . and, from the new seed sprang a warmer, and more wonderous relationship strengthened by a mutual desire to improve one another.

There were trials and errors. There was frustration and fatigue. There was agony and ecstacy. It was a road paved with gold yet there were stumbling stones. But, always we tried to please each other, to be understanding, enthusiastic, diligent, and decisive. To build a structure based on a foundation of honesty, openness, integrity and finally — love.

Where either of us were lacking we strove to compliment one another and always to make the best of things. To share and care and not to shun and run, to face the challenges head on. We strove to be flexible not rigid, to be considerate not callous, to be sympathetic not apathetic, to be constructive not destructive, to create a relationship in which we can truly say we grew together and felt for one another. A relationship that would leave its mark on time, and that, by having occurred would make the future brighter for us.

There is an emptiness now that it is ending. But it will always have a place in my heart. Thank you Stern College for making our relationship a memorable one.

YEARBOOK STAFF

Sheila Kalish — Business Manager

Miriam Blechner — Business Manager

The editors in chief, that's us — Esti and Sherri, wish to express our thanks to those special people who assisted us in producing this fine yearbook. That's you — Mr. Phil St. Pierre — representative American Yearbook Company, Billy Spivak — photographer, Beile Ganz — coordinating editor, Miriam Blechner and Sheila Kalish — business managers, and the roommates and visitors of room 7g, especially Magda Grosz, Foozie Chesler, Debbie Fink, Mara Cumsky, Ronnie Tanzman, Faigi Willig, and our own encouraging families. Thank you all for your cooperation, enthusiasm, time and effort.

Oh yes! Esti thanks Sherri and Sherri thanks Esti, two editors who really wearied, worried and worked together. And thanks to all the seniors. Without you there really wouldn't be a yearbook!

Sincerely,
Sherri & Esti
